THE FOUR CLASSES.

We have not taken any decided position on the Presidential question, for the reason that the scenes in the political drama are so constantly shifting that it is impossible to say what changes may be wrought in public sentiment, or what influences may be brought to bear to effect that sentiment, before the meeting of the National Democratic Convention at Baltimore, on the 9th of July.

Two objects, however, we have kept constantly and steadily in view: first, the preservation of the unity and organization of the Democratic party, and secondly, the policy of uniting all the elements of anti-Radicalism with the view of defeating the re-election of Grant.

As to the accomplishment of the latter purpose, as it is simply a matter of policy, there has been much speculation as well as difference of opinion.

We think there should be but two candidates in the field—Radical and anti-Radical. If two or more candidates opposed to Grant be voted for, it will divide the opposition, and insure our defeat.

Horace Greeley has been nominated by Liberal Republicans, representing every State in the Union.

The National Democratic Convention will be called upon to say whether or not our party shall accept the Cincinnati ticket, or nominate straight Democratic candidates.

It is possible also, our Convention may take another question into consideration. If after consultation, it be determined that Mr. Greeley cannot secure the full vote of the Democratic masses might, not a proposition be made to Mr. Greeley and his friends, to put forward the name of some other Liberal Republican as the Presidential candidate, who can thoroughly unite both the Liberal Republican and Democratic strength, and thus make the victory over Radicalism an easy one?

As matters now stand, we are almost sure that no ticket will be put forth at Baltimore in opposition to Greeley and Brown. And we think it highly improbable that Greeley can be induced to abandon the field now, under any circumstances. Consequently, we conclude that the fight, by the force of circumstances, will be narrowed down between Greeley and Grant, and that as between these two candidates the people will have to make choice.

The last Washington Patriot, in an able editorial headed "Where we stand," makes four classifications of Democratic opinion as follows:

1. Those who insist upon adopting the Cincinnati ticket, without hesitation or condition.

2. Those who favor co-operation with the Liberal Republicans, but do not approve Mr. Greeley.

3. Those who reject all compromises and demand a "straight ticket."

4. Those who respect the usages of the party, and who accept regular nominations as obligatory.

After discussing the first three classes, the Patriot says of the fourth class:

"The fourth class represents the Conservative feeling, which, though sympathizing strongly with the policy of fusion as developed by the Democratic press before the Cincinnati Convention, is prepared to abide the result at Baltimore, to ignore its real or supposed grievances when a nomination shall be made, and to go to work honestly and vigorously for the candidate whoever he may be."

That such has all along been the position of the News our readers are well aware.

We have endeavored to give a fair statement of the arguments both for and against the endorsement of Greeley, preferring to leave the matter to the judgment, wisdom and patriotism of the Baltimore Convention. Its decision, whatever it may be, as loyal Democrats we should be prepared to approve and support.

We may add, we do not think the hearty, unconditional endorsement by the South of Greeley's claims will add to his strength among Liberal Republicans at the North, and therefore good policy alone condemns the course of action of some of our Democratic exchanges, whose zeal and impatience seem to out-run their judgment.

C. H. BROODEN, the Radical candidate for Lieutenant Governor, voted while in the Senate of North Carolina, to put negro officers over white privates, in the State Militia.

MR. CONIGLAND'S SPEECH.

It is with pleasure we refer our readers to the eloquent and patriotic effort of Edward Conigland, Esq., of Halifax for which we are indebted to the Roanoke News.

We had the pleasure of hearing this speech at Greensboro, where it was received with much applause, and produced a very fine effect.

Mr. Conigland is well known as one of the ablest lawyers as well as one of the best and most patriotic citizens in the State. Halifax should be proud of this gifted and high-toned gentleman.

Mr. Conigland will take an active part in the present State canvass. He has already made some appointments, and will continue in the field until the sun goes down on the first Thursday in August.

GOVERNOR CALDWELL signed the Radical Legislative address of 1863, indirectly counselling the negroes to steal, and rob, and burn and murder!

GOVERNOR CALDWELL was nominated by a Convention which endorsed the past course of Gov. W. W. Holden—and especially his conduct in 1860-70.

MISREPRESENTATION.

A correspondent of the Era, giving an account of Maj. Smith's campaign in Chatham, has made several patent misrepresentations, to say nothing of the exaggerated and supremely ridiculous boasts in which he indulges.

This correspondent says Mr. Manning's reply to Maj. Smith at Pittsboro, contained nothing remarkable, except a justification of Congress in passing the Revenue tax bills. We have Mr. Manning's own statement to the effect that this is absolutely untrue. On the contrary, he denounced the Revenue system, and congratulated Maj. Smith on the fact that the latter, in favoring the abolition of the system, occupied Democratic ground, and opposed the policy of the Radical party—of which he was the nominee.

The Era's correspondent also states that Mr. Manning went to Ferrington's Mill, on the day Major Smith spoke, but became disheartened "and quit the canvass." This statement is also untrue. Mr. Manning did not go to Ferrington's Mill at all. He replied to Maj. Smith at Pittsboro, and Womble's store, but did not attend at Ferrington's Mill.

In regard to the large majority in Chatham for Smith which the correspondent boasts of so blusteringly, it is all boosh. From the best sources of information we have—from gentlemen of prudence and reliability, we can certainly count on a very handsome majority for Col. Rogers.

It is evident that Major Smith is playing a very strong game of brag. But the trick is rather thin. It cannot deceive the public.

Gov. CALDWELL has set aside plain acts of the Legislature, which it was his sworn duty to obey until pronounced unconstitutional by the Courts.

THE CHARLOTTE DESPATCH.

This paper which has heretofore been under the management of Maj. William A. Hearne, came to us yesterday with the name of Gen. D. H. Hill at the head of its editorial columns.

Gen. Hill, as Editor of The Land We Love, and Southern Home, has made an enviable reputation as a writer and newspaper conductor. The hero of Boonsboro and South Mountain has exhibited a grace and power in the use of the pen equal to the skill and valor with which he wielded the word in defence of the honor and institutions of the South.

The following is his Salutatory CARD.

In assuming editorial control of the Daily Despatch, I intend to co-operate heartily with all my contemporaries, weeklies and dailies that are earnestly striving to overthrow the government of the bayonet in order to restore that of the constitution and civil law. Towards the friends of military despotism, I will extend that courtesy they deserve.

The business of the Despatch and Southern Home will be kept distinct. The Despatch Company will carry out in good faith all contracts for advertising, subscriptions, &c. I have no connection with such contracts and no responsibility on account of them.

D. H. HILL.

Governor Caldwell framed the bill which passed the Radical Legislature, on the 29th day of January, 1869, appropriating seven millions of dollars for the completion of Western Railroad—under which Act, Swenson and Littlefield robbed the State of several millions of dollars.

RADICAL SENTIMENT.

Neill McKay, of Harnett county, is the Radical candidate for Congress in the 3rd District against Hon. A. M. Waddell. In his speech of acceptance of the Radical nomination, McKay is represented as having said that if the Republicans carry this election, hereafter there will be no kitchen and no parlor. In other words that all social distinctions between the two races will be abolished.

McKay attempted to deny this assertion, which was first made through the Fayetteville Eagle, but the following certificate by four gentlemen, who are vouched for as men of the very highest character and reliability, fixes the charge upon McKay beyond all cavil:

CERTIFICATE.

"We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that we were present during the speech made by Neill McKay in accepting the nomination for Congress in the 3d District, and that he did use the expression as charged in the Eagle, 'rally this last time and carry the election, and there will be no kitchen and no parlor!'"

P. H. MURPHY,
JOHN A. ASHPOD,
T. J. LEE,
LEWIS H. MOORE.

The Wilmington Journal, commenting on the above, says:

But we tell Mr. McKay and his Radical supporters, that the negroes will have to vote down something else in the State of North Carolina to bring about the time when there shall be no "parlor and no kitchen." They will have to vote down and beat down that feeling in the breast of every white man in the State that would force him, in spite of law and bayonets and bullets, to kill his sister or his daughter ere he gave her to the embrace of a negro.

They will have to vote down and beat down that feeling in the breast of every white woman that would make her hail death as a joyous deliverance from so loathsome and disgusting a fate.

McKay, the Radical nominee for Congress in the 3rd District, called upon his party, in his speech of acceptance, to rally one more time and carry the election, and there would be no kitchen and no parlor. McKay supports Caldwell.

Governor Caldwell allowed one hundred arms to be sent from the State Arsenal, to arm a volunteer negro company in Wilmington.

Governor Caldwell is in favor of the suspension of the writ of Habeas Corpus in the South.

[From the Roanoke News, Speech of Edward Congland, Esq., Delivered at the close of the Democratic Convention in Greensboro, May 2nd, 1872.]

I am somewhat surprised, Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, at my temerity, in attempting, without preparation, to address this large, and evidently refined and intelligent audience; but I must respond, as best as I can, to the flattering call which has been made upon me.

If allowed a reference to myself, I may be permitted to say, that whilst I cannot be called a politician, I have worked for the Democratic party from the day I was twenty-one years of age until this day, and have never yet bolted a regular nomination, shirked a duty, or dodged a vote. How long I have been thus enlisted, I do not care to make known, and do not care to be asked. I have never held but one public position, and was elected to that after a contest which satisfies me, that he who canvasses the State with a formidable competitor, or even with the present Radical nominee for Governor of North Carolina, need not be envious the fruits of victory, should victory be his.

The greatest of English poets tells us: "Some men are born great; some achieve greatness; and some have greatness thrust upon them." This may, in a certain sense, apply to office-holding in England, where some of the highest offices are hereditary, and men are born to them. But in the New World, not even such as Prince Frederick, though he may have for foster-father the general-in-chief of the army, can be said to be born to office. If I may be allowed an expression, he who attains office in the United States, must achieve it. In this matter, as in things spiritual, the admonition applies, "Seek, and you shall find." Office, as like in North Carolina as elsewhere, like the Kingdom of Heaven, is taken by thrust upon him. Perhaps no better illustration of the truth of what I have said can be found than an instance in our own State, to which I beg to refer. A man who, through good and evil report, in war as well as in peace, has been the able and zealous defender of civil liberty; of unimpeachable integrity himself, his heart quickened in contemplating the corruption and profligacy of the General and State governments; a man gifted with the highest intellectual endowments, whose abilities would grace the Senate of the United States, with all the grace of a Clay, a Webster, or an Alabama, yet who has passed to the Kingdom of Heaven, without public recognition. I refer to B. F. Moore, of Raleigh. I cannot forget what he said to me, a good many years ago, when journeying with him to Court: "Do not," said he, "go into politics, for if a man goes into politics at twenty-one, and remains till forty-five the chances are ten to one, that he will come out a rascal." Now, at this time, he was deeply engaged in politics himself, and I suppose, taking heed to his own theory, he deemed it better to quit in time. It must be confessed that there was, and is, much ground for the remark. But scanning the history of the two great parties which divided North Carolina in the past, as well as of that great party into which they have merged in the present, it is gratifying to know that we can refer to many among them who have held and now hold public position, as presenting instances of the highest sense of honor and integrity. May I speak of the Macons, the Rufins, the Gastons, the Moreheads and the Glimers, and other illustrious men, now sleeping with their fathers, but whose examples seem to have been given as guides to be followed in these days of political profligacy. I can't permit the occasion to pass, without bearing my humble testimony to the exalted character of one whose worth deserved public mention by our Convention just adjourned. I can judge him by the severest of all tests, the close contact and observation of more than twenty-five years. He was called on to fill many numerous and delicate private trusts; he was honored by his State with the highest offices she had to bestow, and it is a consoling thought, as well as the highest eulogy, to be able to say of him, that he passed unscathed through the ordeal of corrupt times, and went down to his rest with an unspotted name. I revere his memory because his aims were high in the true sense, because he was a patriot who loved his section most, when the cause for which his people had struggled, went down in darkness and in sorrow. He was not only a great lawyer, who would have ranked among the first of his profession even in Westminster Hall, but he was an honest one, and over his grave may be fitly inscribed:

THOMAS BRAGG.
"The Grave of a Great and Honest Lawyer."

Cujus est solus ejusque ad eum.

Perhaps our State has furnished no better representatives of the two great parties of which I have spoken, and no happier instance of the virtuous and the good, forgetting past differences, and joining in their country's cause, than the deceased friend to whom I have referred, and one who is yet spared to animate us by his example, and to guide us by his wisdom and counsel; a man of any man the peer, whose public life has illustrated the history of his State, and has earned for himself the character of patriot as well as statesman. How can that administration ask our support, which exiles such a man as William A. Graham from all share in the government, whose councils he has adorned?

When, from the body of the convention, I looked on the platform to day, my heart swelled with pride over so many of North Carolina's ablest and most worthy sons there assembled; men who have been true to her amid all her trials and who, with God's help, will yet rescue her from the brood of harpies who have been preying upon her very vitals. Whilst it may not be allowable to pass judgment upon the motives of individuals, yet the very acts and conduct of public men are legitimate subjects of comment. It may be that those who deserted their life-long principles, and threw their influence with the oppressors of their people, when profit and public position could be gained only by such a course, are among the pure in heart. But nothing less than an extraordinary illumination of the spirit, can make us believe, that they have not sold their birthright for a mess of pottage. Christian charity forbids us to pry upon their heads the imprecation of the past upon these mercenaries who betray their people in the hour of their greatest need.

"Just Prophet! let the damned one dwell, Full in the sight of Paradise, Beholding heaven and feeling hell!"

On the contrary we are required to beg for their return in this world, and their happiness in the next. Doubtless they all loudly protest their patriotism, but we have been assembled here before me, and I had trusted up in a proper pellet, the curse of the poet to be thrown at, and visited upon, the most guilty, we would find a repetition of the scene, related of the French Priest who preaching on the conjugal relations, declared that one woman in the church had been guilty of disobedience to her husband and he would throw his brevity at her, whereupon, as she suited the motion to the word, every woman in the congregation ducked her head—assuredly, in the case I have supposed, the great majority would duck their heads.

In the course of my life, I have never seen a more harmonious body than our State Convention of yesterday and to-day. I am persuaded that every member of it feels satisfied with its work. This is as it should be.

"Order is heaven's first law, and this confest, Some are, and must be, greater than the rest."

We cannot all be office-holders, but we can insist, that those who seek office through our suffrages, shall be good and honest men and true representatives of our principles. Such is the character of the men we have nominated—men who, if elected, will devote themselves to the conscientious discharge of the duties of their office, and will not use public position as a cover for the oppression of their people and their own emolument.

At the head of our ticket we have a standard bearer worthy of our support. He deserves to be honored with the best position in our gift, but for his local position in declaring that as a Judge he should administer the laws of North Carolina in their purity, and in resigning his office rather than obey the behests of a military strap. Independent of this, for which he is entitled to our gratitude and admiration, his energy, his fidelity, his integrity and his acknowledged ability, eminently fit him to take the lead in a contest so portentous of weal or woe to the future of North Carolina. Whilst I entertain the highest regard for the honorable gentlemen brought forward for the nomination in the Convention, A. S. Merriam was my first choice, and if I had had a thousand votes, for him, I should have done so with all my heart. I shall do all in my power to promote his success, and think I may safely pledge for him the highest white vote ever polled in Halifax county—we have a host of young men—good speakers all, and they will unite their exertions, with my own, to effect such a result. Let us elect him, my friends, and we will begin a new era of prosperity, to be noted as much by integrity in the administration of the laws, as the past few years have been marked by official turpitude. When we consider the distinguishing characteristics of the government of the State, during the dynasty of the Carpet-bagger and the sealawag, to end, I trust, with the present radical nominee for Governor, the period must be designated by the historian as the epoch of "The Forty Thieves." I commend this point to the consideration of Gov. Graham, should he indeed crown the labors of his life, by writing a history of North Carolina.

And now a few words to my friends of the West. I have never visited your section of the State, still I know, that it has all the elements of prosperity, and deserves to be ranked among the finest regions in the world. But my friends, have your people done their duty of late years, on election day? I say it not in anger, but simply to impress upon you the necessity of increased exertion, that all the elections we have lost since the war, we have lost through the supineness of the West. You may send your orators among us in the East—we will receive them with open arms, but let me tell you that "The poor Greeks are at your very doors." You need your speakers at home, to rouse your people into action. Although the white men of the East, especially in the Second Congressional District, have been turned over to negro domination, yet, excluded as they are from local position, unobscured by the desire for office, they are faithful and true. You need have no fears for us, we will march in solid column to the polls for Merriam; can you say the same? We have placed before you for your suffrages, one of your own distinguished sons—should he be defeated, yours will be the shame, and yours the disgrace—should you, his own people, desert him in this contest, you do not deserve ever to see a tunnel through your mountains, or ever to hear the shriek of the locomotive in your valleys—but you should again, as in such an event, you surely will be subjected to all the evils of Radical rule. Let me beseech you then my friends to go home with the determination to do your duty, and your whole duty. Let every man of the least influence devote all the time he can spare to the canvass—make known even to the humblest of your people, the fraud, the corruption, the spoliation of these woe, of late, have had the government of the State in their hands, explore every place where a vote may be found, and bring your fellow-citizens to the polls, then in August next, the voices of the East and of the West, from the sea shore to the mountains, will mingle in our universal acclaim of victory.

Although I have detained you so long I cannot close without referring to the taste with which our hall was decorated. I was especially pleased with the national flag, placed behind the chair of the distinguished President of the Convention, and could not but regard the legend upon it "In hoc signo vinces," as ominous of victory. First seen upon a luminous Cross, at mid-day in the heavens, by Constantine the great, it became the device of his banners, and led him on to triumph over all his enemies. So inscribed upon the flag of the Union, it shall become the harbinger of our redemption. The blatant demagogues whose patriotism is ever subsidiary to their personal gain, and whose adherence to any cause is measured by the extent of their profit and loss, say that we are traitors to that flag. But it is ours. A Southern man first gave its name to undying music and song—on the fields of its greatest triumphs, it was borne by Southern hands, and sanctified by Southern blood—every principle that has made it famous and dear to the lovers of liberty throughout the world, has been consecrated by Southern genius and valor, nor has it ever yet wavered in any part of the globe that it has not effected the fame of some Southern warrior or statesman whose deeds have made it illustrious. We are not now, and have never been, foes to that flag—we are the foes only of those who would dim the brightness of its stars and make its stripes the emblems of blood. Men who, although the rage of the battle is over, carry hatred and revenge in their hearts, and would deprive us of all that makes life endurable. With these men we are still waging a fearful contest, and the issue is, whether the Constitution shall be preserved, or whether, upon its ruins, a centralized despotism, more intolerant than the autocratic government of Russia, shall be erected. Can the issue be doubtful? Under that flag still so dear to us, by that sign, "In hoc signo vinces," and animated by the purpose to restore the government to its original purity, victory must be ours. Let us onward—let us march to the music of the Union, to do battle for the right before the forum of public opinion. Our foes in the contest, are the foes of liberty every where, and you can rally under the cry: "We are on the soil that bore us. The old flag flies over us. The friends we've tried are by our side, And the foes we've dared before us."

MOTTO:—Low Prices

"GOOD-BYE, DARLING."

BY NETTIE POWER HOUSTON.

"Good-by, darling!" That was all,
Twilight shades began to fall;
Stars peeped through the purple sky,
And the river rippled by.

"Good-by, darling!" One more kiss
(Sweetest seal of earthly bliss)
Fell upon my blushing cheek,
Then he paused. How could we speak?

"Close he held me in his arms,
Even parting both his charms,
Who remembers Sorrow's dash,
Cheek to cheek and heart to heart?

"Good-by, darling?" whispered low—
We had known such bliss before,
Must it end? Must this farewell
Faint of love's story tell?

No; we parted for a while,
Each would meet the other's smile
In the joyous days to come,
When our hearts would feel no gloom.

"Good-by, darling!" still I hear,
When the stars shine bright and clear,
When the rivers ripple by,
And the passing zephyrs sigh.

"Good-by, darling!" soft and low—
Words of love and words of woe,
Still the river ripples by,
But it was our last "Good-by!"

There are griefs the heart may know,
Blighting all of life below;
Yet we live and journey on,
When our every hope is gone.

Through my woman's soul is bowed
And each hope is in its shroud,
"Good-by, darling!" I could hear,
When they laid my heart away!
